

From April 2008, I will be mounting a series of exciting exhibitions in a new gallery at 28 Hatter Street, Bury St Edmunds.

'I want to create a space in Bury that will be a dynamic place to view and buy great art.

An important part of my philosophy is to show a broad spectrum of art, juxtaposing the old and the new, and hanging very different styles alongside each other. The centre of the gallery's core strategy is to present work of high quality whilst representing good value for money.'

Exhibits will include contemporary art through to classic painting and print-making, by artists ranging from the new to established household names.

I am planning four main exhibitions, each featuring work by two contrasting artists.

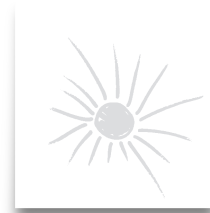

The gallery will also showcase a variety of techniques: oils, watercolours, original prints, photographs and sculpture, with prices from £35 to £7000.

An increasingly important aspect of the gallery is to assist clients in developing interior design concepts, both in the home and business environment. This can include advice on framing and hanging pictures.

The first exhibition will be English painter Vernon Rose and the New York street photographer Markus Hartel from 18 April to 14 May 2008.

I look forward to welcoming you.
